

FIN 6930: Capitalism, Capital Markets and Regulation

Course Objective: This course is designed to give students an understanding of the economics of regulation that will allow them to better understand the regulation of financial markets and financial institutions.

Course Description: This course starts out with a discussion of the economics of regulation. These concepts provide the ground work for understanding and evaluating the regulation of financial markets and financial regulation.

Prerequisites: Graduate student.

Textbook: Saving Capitalism from the Capitalists” by Raghuram Rajan and Luigi Zingales

Grading: Course grades are determined by your scores on a mid-term and final exam and various homework