FSOA Students Receive Honorable Mention in the 2009 Deloitte Tax Case Study Competition

Led by faculty advisor Sandra Kramer, a team of Fisher School of Accounting students received honorable mention in the graduate division of the 2009 Deloitte Tax Case Study Competition. The team members were Yugia Hu, Grensy Quintero, Lan Su, Anthony Vetter and Alexandra Kowalczyk (alternate). Each student on the team received $200 and the school received $2,000.00.

The tax competition, held on Friday, October 17th in Jacksonville, was sponsored by the Deloitte Foundation. Teams worked against the clock to complete a complex, hypothetical case study that drew on students’ knowledge of tax topics. Students were given five hours to complete a case study that required them to analyze information, identify issues and alternative tax treatments, and develop a recommended solution that appropriately cites the Internal Revenue Code and Treasury Regulations. At the end of the competition, teams prepared a written solution to their case and submitted it to a panel of judges from Deloitte Tax for evaluation.
