Forty years ago, the school of Accounting was created as an experiment. At that time, there was no certainty that the experiment would survive its six-year probation period. The School not only survived to become permanent, its creation, along with the later endowment that created the Fisher School of Accounting, turned out to be a major tipping point for the accounting program at the University of Florida. We are all proud of the high quality of our students, faculty, staff, and programs. The Fisher School has achieved the kind of international reputation that those early School founders envisioned when they set out to create something special over 40 years ago.

The world has changed over the last 40 years, and the accounting profession is not immune to that change. The Fisher School works hard to not only adapt to change, but to lead change. We prepare our graduates for their societal roles in the future, and we believe they will lead the way in the rapidly changing world of accounting and business.

The items in this report highlight only a few of the stories and achievements of our students, faculty, and programs. Those familiar with the Fisher School know that these items only skim the surface of a program devoted to excellence in all we do.

It takes all of us, students, faculty, staff, alumni, and friends, to make the Fisher School of Accounting what it is. I thank you all for your part in our success. I look forward to the next 40 years of building on the foundation that was only a dream a half century ago.

This year, the Fisher School of Accounting celebrates its 40th anniversary of moving from a department to the School currently known as one of the nation’s best.

GORDON HALL IS FILLED WITH HIGH performing students, productive faculty members, and a caring staff. Together, this combination has constructed the national reputation of the program. However, it took time, effort, and passion for the School to come into existence.

After John Simmons was appointed chair of the accounting program in 1974, one of his first decisions was to put together an external steering committee to explore the possibility of reorganizing the department as a School of Accounting. When Simmons mentioned the idea to Dean Robert Lanzillotti, it was met with support and a hint of uncertainty. He had one request. To prove the school would be financially viable, Lanzillotti wanted at least $1 million in outside funding before considering the option.

“We expected there would be financial and moral support from accounting practitioners and firms, the FICPA, and the State Board of Accountancy,” Simmons said. “It took a few months and efforts by several key people to raise $1 million gift to name the School of Accounting. Fisher said.

Today, the Fisher School serves as a pillar in accounting education across the world. Consistently ranked among the best programs, the School benefits from a large, stand-alone facility that has served as the home for accounting students since 2004. Gerson Hall, named in honor of Gary R. Gerson (BSAc ’55, MBA ’56), is a 36,000-square foot, $9.3 million structure.

The constant growth of the Fisher School of Accounting is no surprise. As placement rates continue to stay among the best in the country and graduates have increased impacts in the accounting world, the reputation of the Fisher School will only grow stronger as it heads into the next 40 years. “The foundation of the Fisher School was built by the extraordinary efforts of many faculty, staff, students, and supporters,” said Dr. Gary McGill, Director of the Fisher School. “We are proud of the history, rigor, and quality we have built over many decades. We are even more excited about the future of the Fisher School as we continue to work together to develop leaders of the future and contribute to knowledge in our field.”

ED FERNANDEZ (BSAc ’78) WAS STARTING at what most would consider a dream opportunity. He was the youngest of six candidates for the open Chairman position at KPMG while already running the firm’s strategic consulting business and serving as a member of its executive committee.

However, he was already beginning to think about starting his own company. He had stability and was moving up at KPMG, but the thought of building his own organization was always a yearning.

“There’s always a point in your career where you have to make an important decision,” Fernandez said. “I was led by a burning desire to do something different on my own. It seemed like the timing was right.”

After 18 years with KPMG, Fernandez withdrew from the running for the Chairman position and decided to leave the company. One of his early conversations at the transition was with Ed Miller (BSBa ’78), an accounting friend who also graduated from UF and was working at Goldman Sachs. Miller introduced Fernandez to Bruce Rauner, who currently serves as the Governor of Illinois. Fernandez, with Miller’s help, ultimately raised half the money to start his own venture and Rauner funded the other half through GTRC, his private equity firm.

Fernandez founded AnswerThink in May 1997. Instead of sitting in his large office on the 30th floor of KPMG’s south Florida office, he was now sharing an office an investor allowed him to use with two other people.

But success came quickly to his new venture. Six months after AnswerThink was founded, they acquired The Hackett Group. Fernandez knew he was gaining a valuable brand, and that was able to expedite the company’s growth. One year after the acquisition occurred, the company went public.

“We had incredible success at a very rapid pace,” Fernandez said.

Today, The Hackett Group serves as an intellectual property-based strategic consultancy and leading enterprise benchmarking and best practices implementation firm to global companies. The company offers digital transformation and enterprise application approaches, including robotic process automation and cloud computing. Services also include business transformation, enterprise performance management, working capital management, and global business services.

The hard times came in the spring of 2000. The market crashed and NASDAQ plummeted. Companies across the country were reevaluating their model and searching for the most effective way to move forward. The Hackett Group was no different.

“It was about redefining the business for the best opportunity,” Fernandez said. “For us, we decided that was to recreate the company leveraging the intellectual capital we had and continue to have today.”

The Hackett Group has now become a formidable competitor to the Big Four accounting firms.

“What I’m most proud of is how our brand and services compete so effectively against these much larger companies today,” Fernandez said. “We created that from scratch and compete effectively against these massive firms that have done it for 100 years.”

Warrington is where Fernandez grew in accounting. While a student, he also started a local dance studio and club. Professors playfully joked with him about being able to focus on his studies, but being able to learn in the classroom and immediately apply it to his entrepreneurial pursuits was beneficial.

“I really benefitted from the UF environment and entrepreneurial involvement I had in Gainesville,” Fernandez said. “It helped me that everything I was learning in the classroom was being applied in some of the startups I had. I left UF with a much richer experience because of my involvement on and off campus.”
Hannon Costello (BSAC '15, MACC '16) received the Elijah Watt Sells Award, given to CPA candidates who have obtained a cumulative average score above 95.5 across four sections of the Uniform CPA Examination, passed all four sections of the exam on their first attempt, and completed testing in 2016.

With 102,323 individuals taking the exam in 2016, Costello was one of 58 candidates to meet the criteria for the award.

“The CPA Examination, along with the education and experience required, sets a high bar for entry into the profession. This serves to protect the public interest by ensuring that only qualified individuals earn a CPA license,” American Institute of CPAs Vice President of Examinations Michael Decker said. “On behalf of the AICPA, I’d like to congratulate this year’s winners of the Elijah Watt Sells award on their outstanding accomplishment and wish them the best of luck in their careers.”

The award program was established by AICPA in 1923 to recognize outstanding performance on the CPA examination.

How meaningful was it for you to win the Elijah Watt Sells Award?

Costello: “The Elijah Watt Sells Award is one of my proudest achievements. Like most of my peers, I began preparing for the CPA exam with one goal in mind – get a 75 and call it a day. I enrolled in a review course, developed a study plan, and cracked open the books. Though my exam performance was a pleasant surprise, this award represents so much more than a summer of review videos and practice questions. Elijah Watts Sells reflects all of the college exams, group projects, internships, and relationships that made the person I am today. My journey to this award started years before I developed a summer study plan, and I am excited to see what the future holds.”

How did your time at the Fisher School help you win this award and shape your career?

Costello: “The Fisher School of Accounting had a significant impact on my academic and professional career. I thank the Fisher School for its many opportunities, such as the professors, students, and networking events. The professors are some of the brightest minds in the field and do an incredible job preparing students for success both inside and outside the classroom. I honestly do not believe that I would have received this award or be in my current job position had I not attended the Fisher School of Accounting and had classes with some of the greatest professors and classmates in the field.”

What are you doing at Deloitte now?

“I am a Tax Consultant in Deloitte’s Tax Delivery practice in Dallas, Texas. TMC combines tax and technology to deliver solutions that improve the efficiency and effectiveness of tax processes. Service offerings include Tax Data Management and Analytics, Tax Systems, Global Compliance and Reporting, and Enterprise Tax Integration. I work in our Tax Systems group and travel across the country to implement tax provision software and help clients streamline their tax provision processes.”
ALUMNI SPOTLIGHT
Barbara Jean Raskin

ACCOUNTANT & ADVOCATE

Barbara Jean Raskin (BSBA ‘73) recalls that when she graduated in 1973 from the Warrington College of Business, the accounting students she walked across the stage with were mostly male.

“There were maybe 3 or 4 women in the program, tops,” she said.

While it was something that she never really thought about while in school, it was a significant factor once she started applying for jobs.

“If you were a woman, you had to have at least a 4.0 to be considered for a position at one of the ‘Big Eight’ accounting firms,” Raskin said. “Which was where everyone aspired to work.”

Instead, Raskin decided to take her skills in accounting to a smaller firm. There, she continued to face an uphill battle.

At the firm, Raskin was hired at a lower salary than a male colleague, who started on the same day as her. She then passed the CPA exam before him and was continued to be paid less. When she asked why she was being paid less than the male colleague, she was told he had a family to support, and therefore, deserved a higher salary than she did as a single woman.

Raskin said she was told that for a single girl, she made a lot of money.

“I knew then I had to take my destiny into my own hands and make the business world a better place for myself and for other women,” Raskin said.

Since then, Raskin has dedicated her time to various organizations devoted to elevating women in business. In 1986, she was elected as the chair of the Florida delegation to the White House Conference on Small Business, where Raskin testified in front of Congress about the issues facing women-owned and small businesses. She has also served on more than 15 different boards for organizations like the Miami-Dade County Commission on the Status of Women, the Women’s Chamber of Commerce of Greater Miami, the City of South Miami Commission for Women, and the National Association of Women Business Owners, among others.

The breadth of Raskin’s work speaks to her dedication and ability to network, which she advises current students take advantage of while in school.

“Be aware of networking,” she said. “It’s very important to do with fellow students, staff, professors, and industry professionals.”

FISHER TEAM TAKES SECOND PLACE IN DELoitTE CASE COMPETITION

A TEAM OF FIVE STUDENTS FROM THE FISHER School of Accounting finished in second place at the 2017 Deloitte Audit Innovation Case Competition on December 3–4 in Charlotte, North Carolina.

The case focused on Current Expected Credit Loss (CECL), the new accounting model the Financial Accounting Standards Board (FASB) has issued for the recognition and measurement of credit losses for loans and debt securities. Fisher’s team of Kriss Camacho, Rachael Laky, Alex Nelson, Connor Pleban, and Matthew Tuohy was led by faculty advisor Chris Falk and focused on smart contracts and using artificial intelligence to build a model to evaluate contracts. The team’s model also emphasized the use of algorithms to create the auditors’ estimate of expected losses.

Each student received a $100 prize, and the Fisher School received a $1,000 honorarium.
FIVE FISHER SCHOOL ALUMNI WERE HONORED in February at the third-annual Gator100. The Gator100 honors the 100 fastest-growing, Gator-owned or Gator-led businesses in the world. The Gator100 serves not only as a setting where UF’s elite entrepreneurs can gather and share their talents and wisdom, but as an inspiration to fellow Gators to be a part of this exclusive group.

Richard Caplin’s (BSAc ’05, MAcc ’05) healthcare IT consulting firm, The HCi Group, came in at No. 21 and was honored for the third consecutive year. The other four graduates were first-time honorees—RotoGrinders.com COO and Co-Founder Cameron MacMillan (BSAc ’07) was No. 3, Brand Tax Group Managing Director Kristen Brand (BSAc ’99) was No. 90, Advantage Inspection’s Christie Park (BSAc ’82) was No. 94, and LeavenLaw Managing Shareholder Ian Leavengood (BSAc ’95, MAcc ’95, JD ’00) came in at No. 99.

When Debbie Garvin moved from her home state of North Carolina to Gainesville, Fla. after six years of practice in the tax department of a large public accounting firm, she didn’t think she’d be staying for very long. Thirty-four years later, Garvin is set to retire from the Fisher School of Accounting at the end of the fall 2017 semester.

“What started as, at most, a two-year position in my mind became a life-long, incredibly wonderful and fulfilling career,” she said.

Garvin has called the Fisher School home since 1983. Over the course of more than three decades, she has been involved in a range of roles. For 11 years, she served as assistant and associate director of the School and taught one graduate tax course per year. It was teaching those courses that solidified her love of teaching and working with bright, motivated students inspired her to transition to a full-time faculty position in 1994. Since then, she has taught a variety of scholars from freshmen to graduate accounting as well as MBA students.

“One of the things I love about teaching is that you have new students every semester,” she said. “It’s wonderful to watch them grow.”

Garvin has had many students come through her classroom, including Allison McCarthy (BSAc ’98, MAcc ’98), now a real estate and hospitality lawyer at Holland & Knight.

“Debbie always went above and beyond standard lectures and connected what we were learning to real-life scenarios, which not only kept the classes interesting but taught me the process and skills to apply what I learned (not only in my class) to practical work situations,” McCarthy said.

Garvin is particularly proud when students, like McCarthy, come back and tell her how her teaching impacted their careers.

“When students come back and say that the courses I taught them helped set them up for success in their professional careers, that’s such an incredible feeling,” she said.

The positive effect of her teaching is reflected in the numerous teaching awards that line the walls of her office.

While Garvin doesn’t have concrete plans for retirement, she will continue to use her accounting, legal, and business knowledge to help others. Garvin has a particular interest in providing recently released prisoners and recovered addicts practical and financial skills they can use for a successful reentry into society.

“I have the skills that can help them, so I want to do what I can,” she said.

The Fisher School of Accounting, Warrington College of Business, and University of Florida wholeheartedly thank Garvin for her years of service and contributions.
The Fisher School hosted its 10th annual Women in Accounting Symposium in September.

The event provides students with a chance to meet and network with some of the most impactful alumnae and learn more about women making an impact in accounting careers. Fisher alumnae and representatives from some of the nation’s top firms were in attendance for the event.

The Fisher School is thankful to sponsors Deloitte, Dixon Hughes Goodman, Ernst & Young, Grant Thornton, KPMG, PwC, and RSM.

A S MIKE QUACKENBUSH (BSAC ’92, MAcc ’93) surveyed the 40-plus business students gathered for the Fisher School of Accounting’s Careers in Accounting banquet at the Hilton UF Conference Center Hotel, he recognized a familiar look on their faces.

It was the same one he had about 25 years ago when he was wondering which major to pursue.

“I started off as a journalism major, then a finance major before I came to accounting,” said Quackenbush, a Partner at PwC’s Tampa office. “I could definitely see myself in their shoes.”

The Careers in Accounting banquet was designed to help address the uncertainty business students have about careers in accounting. The event hosted some of the College’s top-performing sophomores whose present academic track has them on course for a bachelor’s degree in accounting.

The Fisher School welcomed alumni and recruiters from the Big 4 accounting firms—Deloitte, EY, KPMG, and PwC—as well as BDO, Grant Thornton, and RSM. In addition to formal panel discussions, students dined with these successful business leaders to learn even more about the profession. They also engaged with current Fisher master’s students to learn about the program and their internship and recruiting experiences.

Sophomore Regan Lee, who had already switched majors from finance to accounting, said Tuesday’s event affirmed her commitment to accounting. She was especially pleased to hear about the variety of roles accounting graduates can attain.

“You hear about the traditional route of going into a leadership program, then on to a Big Four,” Lee said. “The banquet helped me realize that once you get there, you’re not stuck in audit or tax the rest of your life. You can go into investment banking or become an entrepreneur and start your own business. You have a lot of options.”

Parvina Esreepersaud, a management major, said the event helped dispel the misconception that accountants are chained to their desks filing tax returns. Esreepersaud said the banquet, plus her positive experience in her Financial Accounting class, has motivated her to pursue an accounting minor.

“I think a lot of us were pleasantly surprised about the directions accounting can take you,” she said.
2016 CPA Exam Performance

The Fisher School continued to see strong outcomes in the CPA Exam.

The School’s first-time candidates distinguished themselves by scoring an overall passing rate of 84.6% for all parts of the CPA exam attempted in 2016. This pass rate placed third in the nation among 284 large academic institutions (defined as having at least 60 candidates) participating in the CPA exam. It also placed the School seventh in the nation among all 858 academic institutions (defined as having at least 10 candidates) taking part in the CPA exam during 2016.

Shannon Costello (BSAc ’15, MAcc ’16) received the Elijah Watt Sells Award, given to CPA candidates who have obtained a cumulative average score above 95.5 across four sections of the Uniform CPA Examination, passed all four sections of the exam on their first attempt, and completed testing in 2016. With 102,323 individuals taking the exam in 2016, Costello was one of 58 candidates to meet the criteria for the award.

PAR Rankings

The Fisher School of Accounting’s undergraduate, master’s, and doctoral programs moved up or held their ranking among public programs in Public Accounting Report’s (PAR) 36th Annual Survey of Accounting Professors.

When ranked against programs at schools with a similar faculty size (17-23 full-time accounting faculty), the undergraduate program ranked No. 3 and the master’s program ranked No. 4 – both holding their strong standing from last year’s rankings.

Public Accounting Report’s (PAR) 36th Annual Survey of Accounting Professors allows professors to rank the nation’s best accounting programs. Approximately 1,000 accounting professors from more than 200 U.S. colleges and universities participated in the 2016 survey.

UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA
Gary McGill, Director of the Fisher School, is a frequent speaker on accounting and taxation in many different contexts. This summer, he shared a different kind of knowledge with the audience of a Boston radio station. Gary was a guest disc jockey on a Saturday morning show called ‘Highway 61 Revisited.’ His show featured artists with a Texas connection and their rock and folk songs from 1966 through 1973.
