Former Big-firm Litigators Kubs Lalchandani And Danny Simon Establish Lalchandani Simon, A Florida Law Firm Based In Miami

Noted Attorneys Combine Unique Backgrounds in Law and Entrepreneurship to Meet a Growing Demand for High-Quality Legal Counsel and Personalized Service.

Kubs Lalchandani and Danny Simon, two former big-firm litigators noted for their experience representing some of the nation’s largest corporations, today announced they have joined forces to establish Lalchandani Simon, a Florida law firm that focuses on social media law, healthcare compliance, intellectual property, electronic information, business planning, and litigation and appeals.

The attorneys, who previously worked at the international law firm White & Case, currently help corporate, governmental and individual clients navigate today’s legal environment, which is growing increasingly complex due to emerging trends in technology, social media, information compliance and intellectual property protection.

"We established Lalchandani Simon because we recognize a need for a law firm that takes a different approach and is dedicated to providing the high-quality legal counsel that the big-name firms offer along with the personalized attention and reasonable fee structures that only a boutique firm can provide," said Lalchandani, who focuses his practice in the areas of cyber and social media law.

Simon, who focuses his practice on commercial litigation, appeals and compliance, added: "We look forward to providing the service clients truly need: superior, trusted legal counsel with a clients-first approach. Always keeping our clients’ best interest at heart, we know how to use the legal system to our clients' advantage."

The attorneys also say they established the firm to help a growing number of companies involved in ecommerce, cloud computing, online records storage, social media and other Internet-related activities to understand the continuously changing legal statutes, regulations and cases that could seriously affect their businesses. "At Lalchandani Simon, we stay ahead of the trends and protect our clients by developing the specific procedures, policies and Internet strategies they need," Lalchandani added.

Lalchandani counsels clients in various industries including healthcare, technology, finance, law, pharmaceuticals, hospitality, marketing and advertising. He is experienced in trademark, copyright, healthcare and general business law, as well as other legal areas related to the Internet. As a successful entrepreneur, counsel for high-tech firms and former international litigator, Lalchandani has vast knowledge... and experience that enable him to provide highly strategic counsel for his clients. Lalchandani graduated in 1999 from Cornell University, in New York, and earned a juris doctor, cum laude, in 2004 from Cornell Law School, where he specialized in international legal affairs.

Simon counsels clients in various industries including technology, data security, healthcare, banking, real estate, accounting, and law. Throughout his career, he has represented a broad spectrum of leading corporations in the software, technology, healthcare, accounting, real estate, banking and legal industries. Simon graduated with highest honors from the University of Florida's top-ranked Fisher School of Accounting with a bachelor's degree in accounting and a minor in economics, as well as significant coursework in physics and engineering. He graduated magna cum laude, Order of the Coif, from Northwestern University School of Law in Chicago.
