

Bachelor of Arts in Business Administration Area of Specialization: *Criminology (CJ)

Description

The Center for Studies in Criminology and Law gives students the opportunity to study how disputes are resolved by application of legal principles to factual situations. Courses explore the role of the police and relationships between gender, race, age and social class and crime, other topics include criminal behavior, the juvenile justice system, and psychology and the law. Students with skills in Criminology apply for jobs in management and administration, sales, human service agencies or areas of the justice department. Criminology is an excellent area of specialization for business students interested in pursuing a law degree.
